Abstract

Evelyn T. Hubbard was an artist known for her architectural painting depicting historic buildings at South Dakota State University. Working in oil on panel, her work documented campus landmarks such as Old Central and Old North, contributing to the visual record of buildings that have since been altered or removed. Hubbard's paintings were valued not only as works of art but also as historical representations, and at least one of her campus scenes was intended by donors to be preserved in a public art setting, reflecting its significance as a cultural and institutional legacy.

Scope and Content

Oil on panel painting by Evelyn T. Hubbard depicting Old Central and Old North at South Dakota State University. The painting is preserved in the archives as a legacy item. A handwritten note dated November 3, 1967, found in the Greater Federation of Women's Clubs collection, records that Chuck Cecil advised contacting Mrs. Earl Washburn of Fulton, South Dakota, regarding the painting. The note indicates the donors' desire that the work be placed in the Art Center.
